Dear Mr./Ms/Dr. ?,

As you know, your article, “ Name of article ” is to be published in The Innovation Journal shortly. Prior to publication, we require your written permission that The Innovation Journal may publish this material with any editorial changes deemed necessary by The Innovation Journal and agreed to by you.

In granting The Innovation Journal this permission, it is understood that you are the author of this material, that you hold the copyright for this material and that you have not divested yourself of this copyright. It is also understood that your permission to publish this material in The Innovation Journal constitutes an exclusive printing agreement with The Innovation Journal and that you have not and will not grant any other individual, group or organization exclusive licence to print this material prior to its use in The Innovation Journal, within a negotiated time frame. It is further understood that this permission enables The Innovation Journal to permit secondary copying, quotation or reproduction of your material as drawn from the published version in The Innovation Journal, and that The Innovation Journal may charge a fee for this purpose. The Innovation Journal would also make an attempt to inform you of any requests for copying.

We provide author profiles with Innovation Journal articles. Please provide me with an electronic one- or two-paragraph biography to include with your paper. Please indicate your current area of academic interest, if applicable. Also, if you have worked and/or published extensively in a particular area, that information would be helpful.

Your signature on this letter constitutes the necessary permission for The Innovation Journal to proceed with publication at a time to be determined by The Innovation Journal. It also authorizes The Innovation Journal to authorize distribution of the paper to aggregators and editors of collected works. If the paper is to be included in an edited book, The Innovation Journal will make an effort to inform the lead author at the last known email address.

Thank you very much for your contribution to The Innovation Journal.

Eleanor Glor, Editor-in-Chief
